This contribution to the BBB series combines commentaries on the two middle books of the Major Prophets. J. organizes his treatment of Jeremiah into five chapters, of which the first is an extensive introduction to the ministry, person, and Book of Jeremiah, while the next three deal with the book's three main segments, i.e., 1:1–25:38; 26:1–45:5; and 46:1–51:66, and chap. 5 focuses on the book's "appendix," Jeremiah 52. In his treatment of the book's major segments, J. provides a summary exegesis of their component sub-sections, together with questions for personal and communal reflection, references to the liturgical use of the Jeremiah material and a series of maps. The end matter of his commentary presents a chronology for Jeremiah's lengthy ministry and a "basic bibliography" of Spanish-language resources on the Book of Jeremiah.

G.'s commentary on Ezekiel, for its part, opens with an introduction that comments in turn on the historical context, Ezekiel's person, his prophetic and literary activity, the Book of Ezekiel and its theology, along with two "complementary notes," dealing, respectively, with the canonicity of the book and its use in the NT. For purposes of his commentary, C. breaks down Ezekiel's 48 chapters into four major segments, i.e., chaps. 1–24, 25–32, 33–39, and 40–48, for the component sub-sections of which he offers brief exegetical comments supplemented with more extended remarks on points of detail (e.g., the Jerusalem temple and the Sabbath) and questions for reflection by the reader. His work concludes with a compact bibliography and a glossary of key terms that figure in his preceding discussion.—C.T.B.
